

The Cabin (81001)

To prevent damage and breakage use the box supplied to protect your work surface. Simply open out the box and lay it on the desired surface to protect both the surface and the parts during construction.

We advise that you first check all parts are present before continuing onto the building stage. If any parts are missing please contact us and we will be happy to assist you.

Dry build your kit first using masking tape to become fully accustomed with the kit. Lightly mark each part with a pencil so that you can identify each part easily when building. You may also like to mark which surfaces will require decoration before full construction; ceiling, scotia strips, porticos, windows and doors for example.

When working through the instruction you should determine the best time to decorate the various parts of the kit. This will allow you to decorate at the best time during full construction. This is why a dry build is advised first. Try making a note on the instructions when painting or wall papering is required and this will help you to remember when you come back to that step.

It is not recommended to keep your dolls' house in a conservatory due to the extremes of temperature.
